BRITISH CONVICTS IN AMERICAN COLONIES

The British were noted for transported prisoners out of England to be made to work at their numerous colonies. From 1615 to 1870, more than 200,000 criminals were conditionally pardoned, exiled, and transported to penal colonies. Before 1775, more than 50,000 prisoners were sent to America—primarily to Virginia and Maryland. With the American Revolutionary War, then from 1788 to 1869, more than 160,000 prisoners were sent to the British Colony of Australia.

What most Americans do not realize is that from 1718 until 1775, convict transportation to the American colonies flourished. Some estimates claim that almost 10 percent of migrants to America during this time were British convicts. This means, if you had ancestors in the American colonies during that time, they might have come as unwanted convicts, against the will.

What was done by the British was to banish a convict to America was for a term of either seven or fourteen years, after which the convict could theoretically come back the Britain. Escaping on a ship to return to England early, however, was punishable by death. This was not just a sentence for men. Some female convicts were transported to the American colonies as well, for crimes such as being "lewd" and "walking the streets after ten at night."

Going back to the early 1600s, convicts had been sent to America. In 1670 authorities in Virginia passed an act that prohibited convicts from being sent to the area. That act was overruled by King. By the early 1700s British convicts were sent over in droves, and free Americans weren't too happy about it. In fact, even before the Transportation Act of 1718 really opened the doors for Britain's dumping of undesirables in America, some colonies tried to pass laws that would prohibit the practice.

Many of those sent to the American colonies were put to work doing manual labor. Or in time of battles – French-Indian War, served as soldiers. Criminals could have been convicted of any type of crime, this included debtors. Those who had murdered were just hung in England and not sent.

About 20,000 convicts were sent to Virginia and settled along the Potomac and Rappahannock Rivers. Knowing where many did originate can help in your own family research. A reminder they were convicts not indentured servants who worked in exchanged for their passage to America. Indentured servants choose to come, convicts did not.

A “PATTERN” OF PRACTICE

Deliberately Withholding Treatment

As of 03/14/20:
<https://a101dataintelligence.com/tuskegee-experiment-syphilis-study>

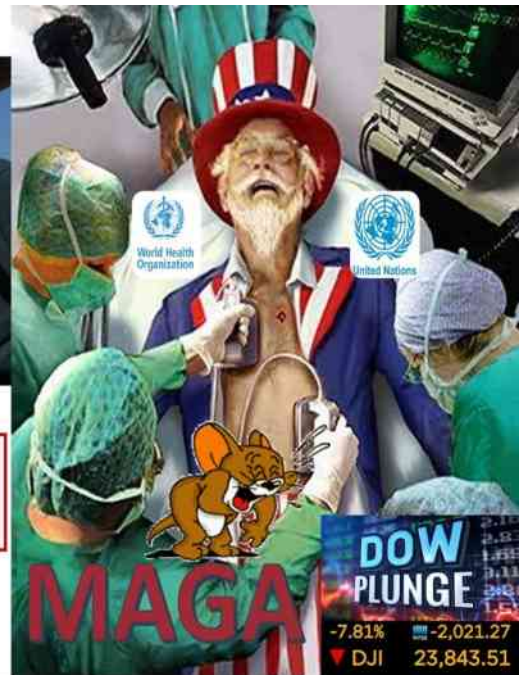

A Tuskegee syphilis study doctor injects a patient with a placebo.

When the Tuskegee experiment first began, doctors already knew how to treat syphilis using arsenic therapy. But he researchers deliberately withheld information about treatment. They told the patients that they were suffering from “bad blood” to keep them from learning about syphilis on their own.

The experiment was unquestionably illegal. By the 1940s, penicillin was a proven, effective treatment for syphilis. Laws requiring treatment for venereal diseases were introduced. The researchers, however, ignored all of this.

Were Trusts set up for Black Indians

AI Overview

Yes, trusts were set up for Black Indians. Specifically, descendants of formerly enslaved people within the "Five Civilized Tribes" (Cherokee, Muscogee/Creek, Seminole, Chickasaw, and Choctaw), historically known as Freedmen, were granted land allotments and trust benefits under the late 19th-century Dawes Act. The University of Tulsa +3

While they were legally entitled to these land allotments and trust rights, the road to receiving and maintaining these benefits has been marked by long legal battles against both tribal governments and the U.S. government: Wikipedia

Non-Self-Governing Territories

Under Chapter XI of the Charter of the United Nations, the Non-Self-Governing Territories are defined as "territories whose people have not yet attained a full measure of self-government". The General Assembly, by its resolution 66 (I) of 14 December 1946, noted a list of 72 Territories to which Chapter XI of the Charter applied. In 1963, the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (also known as the "Special Committee on Decolonization" or the "C-24") approved a preliminary list of Territories to which the Declaration applied (A/5446/Rev.1, annex I). Today, 17 Non-Self-Governing Territories, as listed below, remain on the agenda of the C-24. Member States which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of such Territories are called administering Powers.

WORLDWIDE REVOLUTION FOR THE PEOPLE vs. SECRET WORLD GOVERNMENT SLAVERY...AGENDAS

Those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable.

Yes, John F. Kennedy spoke often about revolution, framing it in terms of global change, the need for peaceful reform in the Americas (Alliance for Progress), and the "first revolution" of American independence, urging his generation to lead the new age of space and technology rather than fall behind, emphasizing that preventing peaceful change can lead to violent upheaval.

Key Instances and Themes:

- The American Revolution: Kennedy frequently invoked America's founding as the "first revolution," reminding citizens they are heirs to that spirit and must continue to innovate and lead.
- The Alliance for Progress (Latin America): He called for a "revolution of the Americas" to bring economic development and dignity, stating: "Those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable," in a key speech about this initiative.
- A Call to Action: He used "revolution" to inspire action and change, whether in foreign policy (supporting emerging nations), domestic policy (economic progress), or scientific endeavors (the Space Race).

In essence, Kennedy saw revolution as an ongoing force for change, advocating for guided, peaceful transformations to prevent destructive conflict and advance human potential.
